Hey everyone! Hope you enjoyed today's episode. I know it was a little short, but this week was the funeral and I've had family in town and we've been running all over the place. I want to thank you all again for all your condolences, well wishes, and prayers. It means a lot to me!

In general I've started making the episodes shorter because I want to focus more on the quality of my work. In the past I've been striving for quantity, and it's made my work suffer. So I decided I would rather go a little smaller and give you all my best work. So that's why you may have noticed episodes are a little shorter. I think it's worth it in the end.
